

Presents a field day on:

Grazing crops and Feeding through winter

A slow start to the year for plant growth is probably an understatement with many of us still busy feeding livestock whilst waiting for grazing crops and pastures to get away. After recent rainfall the biggest question is how long will I have to feed for? Culcairn Landcare invites you to join us as we explore strategies for getting through this winter.

We will explore the intricacies of sheep and cattle nutrition, the practical side of feeding, how long we should be feeding for, the in's and out's of grazing crops, supplements, transitioning on and off of grain, managing weaners, the economics of sell vs feed and more.

Guest speakers:

Rob Inglis, Elders - Specialist in feedlotting and livestock nutrition.

Brian Cummings - Beef specialist

Shawn McGrath - Researcher with CSU and the Graham Centre
